

Associate Campus Minister

Music, Teaching & Discipleship

Vision

The Christian Campus House exists to journey with students by discovering and building a deeper relationship with Jesus and is specifically directed by the core values of belonging, creativity, story, restoration, and revolution. The primary role of an associate minister--out of which flows all other responsibilities--is to be a supportive CCH team member and minister for the students at UCM who find their way in the midst of this community. Our goal is to be a place that models, inspires, and cultivates an authentic response to Christ by seeking a relationship with Jesus that fills us, so we may then interact and be poured out for others by Christ's enabling.

The music, teaching, and discipleship aspects of the associate minister position will primarily consist of working with students already identifying themselves with the Christian Campus House, especially those in leadership, and a part of the music team.

While music is only a part to this community's worship expression, it does hold great impact and requires skill, vision, volunteers, coordination, and planning. Therefore, the staff member is expected to display a general competency in their own artistic craft, as well as an aptitude for increasing and encouraging the growth of those who put forth their time and gifts.

Expectations

As a full-time, partially-salaried position, the Associate Campus Minister role will constitute approximately a 40 hour work week. However, as these roles regularly include weekend and evening responsibilities, the specific apportioning of these hours will be left up to the discretion of the employee. It is expected that the Staff and Board of Directors are at liberty to call into question the effectiveness of said apportioning, if the quality of either the ministry as a whole, or the life of the employee are seen to be less than optimal. Occasional remote work is acceptable, but the employee is expected to be consistently present in the physical building for staff and student relational growth. It is expected that personal days and vacation will be used responsibly in order to promote the overall health of the employee and therefore, the ministry.
